

MADE SCHOOLGIRL SUPPORT FAMILY

Isadore Frascione Sends Thirteen-Year-Old Daughter to Knitting-Mill.

Carrie Frascione, a pretty little Italian girl, aged 13, was today told she would have to go to school instead of supporting her parents and five brothers and sisters. Her father, Isadore Frascione, a large and husky-looking junk dealer living at No. 555 East One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, was told it was his duty and not that of the children to support the family. Magistrate Whitman also ordered Truant Officer McManus to look up the knitting mill where the thirteen-year-old child had been employed.

Carrie, trim and small, but with her hair up above her clear, olive-lined face so she might pass for seventeen or eighteen, stood beside her father in the Morrisania Court. McManus had arrested the junk dealer for failing to send the girl to school. Frascione, a well-known man, was told that he would be forced back on elope cents and vibrating breakfast coffee cups for leading symptoms of spiffification.

"Oh, what a pity it is to rob our clubs, our cafes, yea, even our homes, of their little local color!"

But when science finds a remedy for anything, it's a pity not to profit by it. It's a pity not to encourage science; that's another way of looking at it. In fact, it's the duty of every citizen to put the premium on progress and invention.

Notes of Music.

In her monologues at the Waldorf-Astoria this afternoon Miss Grace Muttel (Mrs. Ralph Kneeland Jones) will be assisted by Harry Anson Truax, tenor, and Miss Madeline Post at the piano.

The Marum Quartet, at its fourth concert in Cooper Union to-night, will be assisted by Eugene Bernstein, pianist. He will join Modest Altschuler in Beethoven's sonata in A major for piano and cello. Mozart's concert in D major and Schubert's quartet in A minor complete the programme.

Rachmaninoff, the Russian composer, conductor, and pianist, has been compelled to postpone until the autumn his appearance here with the Russian Symphony Orchestra. He was to be guest-conductor and piano soloist at the orchestra's concert of April 7, in Carnegie Hall, sharing the baton with Modest Altschuler.

SCIENCE IS READY TO TAKE LOCAL COLOR OUT OF NOSES

No More Rum Blossoms or Blue Lemons to Embarrass the Woman or Man Who Likes a Drink.

Hear ye, hear ye, O faithful followers of the great god Booze! Science has a remedy for the rum-blossom. No longer need our men about-town, and even our lady tipplers, fear the enormity of the red nose. It is doomed. It is condemned. Yes, the rosy proboscis will have to go.

In future we will not be able to pick our sporty bankers from the vulgar herd by the individual sunset hues of their nasal organs. Henceforth, the connoisseur of vintages of rare old Burgundies and sherries, of editions de luxe, of fizz water, and limited stocks of Irish and Scotch will look as abstemious as soda-fountain clerks. And our preachers' wives and mothers will be forced back on elope cents and vibrating breakfast coffee cups for leading symptoms of spiffification.

Oh, what a pity it is to rob our clubs, our cafes, yea, even our homes, of their little local color!

But when science finds a remedy for anything, it's a pity not to profit by it. It's a pity not to encourage science; that's another way of looking at it. In fact, it's the duty of every citizen to put the premium on progress and invention.

So when the medical profession discovers the efficacy of the fresh-air cure for pneumonia, contrast the disease from a few pneumococci in the nearest subway station and give the doctors a chance to whoop it up for science. What is your personal comfort for therapeutic advancement?

And here's a cable despatch from Berlin. Read it intelligently. Read it sympathetically. Read it experimentally. (Which, is to say, get up to the bar and treat. Then apply for front operating-chair seats in the waiting list of Dr. Nessler's American agent-physicians.)

But here is the despatch:

BERLIN, March 21.—Chemurgy, der cradle of scientists, has now eliminated you old American dopesters. Inevitably Professor Nessler has not a lead pipe clench on devastating red noses. He dills with minute platinum points in the vein capillaries of inflamed noses, strikes a shaft, and drains the superfluous blood. Then he forces the soft tissue together in a block of hot air. And a final spray of ordinary heavy-duty hydrogen peroxide and a dusting of pearl powder makes the most blooming nose a nose of ivory.

Why, indeed? When one can have a nose of ivory and pearl; that is, if one has the price.

These little modern methods of science usually cost money. Up-to-date surgery comes high—the higher the never.

Then it takes bunches of boodle to be beautiful. So the drainage of nose veins will probably cost a good deal more than taking out an appendix—that nobody can see anyway, and can only gamble as to whether you left it in a neatly labelled jar of formaldehyde or the top shelf of the hospital museum—or not.

Dr. Nessler has sent no estimates. He will charge a higher fee than the common variety of beauty doctor no doubt. But any little office a top-notch specialist does for you adds dignity. Why shouldn't one boast as much of a red nose and bleached nose "by Nessler" as of a gown by Redfern or a bonnet by Camille Rokej?

Here's a new field for the rivalry of our dowager dames.

For some of these old ladies can show a thing or two in noses that can outshine the headlights of our old blase (to) s.

So may society reward Nessler, the prophet of science!

A Distinctly New and Practical Bed Couch

That double discounts the old sliding or telescope style.

The new one is constructed of metal with National Woven Wire Springs on top; the wire neatly bronzed; in appearance similar to the old telescope style, but it folds up into a single couch or opens into a double bed, and is so constructed as to be all in one part. It is very simple, therefore very strong, and will doubtless be prized by all housekeepers who have small rooms or who want an emergency couch such as these. It is so easily opened and closed that a child can operate it.

Each couch is equipped with a double mattress, nicely covered with sateen.

The regular price for these new couches will be $8, but to introduce them we will sell them on Friday and Saturday at the low introductory price of.....
